This course examines histories of racial thinking (since the mid-19th century) in contemporary Asia. It draws on interdisciplinary scholarship, as well as film, television, and literary texts. This course asks, how is race produced, perceived, and experienced in relation to imperialism, nationalism, revolution, war, and globalization in the region?